Didsbury teen murdered

He came from the city streets and touched a town

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

A former Didsbury teen who made many friends during his short stay in town has been identified as Calgary's first murder victim of the year.

Calgary fire crews found the body of 19-year-old Yonas Amahazion in a garbage dumpster behind the Elks Golf and Country Club in N.E. Calgary in the early morning hours of Thursday, Jan. 4 while responding to a 911 call that the dumpster was on fire.

His body was so badly burned that police relied on dental records to identify him.

Police believe he was murdered before being placed in the dumpster and their investigation continues.

For those who knew Yonas while he was in foster care in Didsbury, news of his death has been devastating.

His former foster parent, Gord Fulton, who cared for Yonas for a year and a half, called his death "a slap in the face."

"When they brought the casket in I just lost it because it was such a waste," said Fulton.

"He was too young and full of life to have something like that happen to him."

Yonas moved back to Calgary last year to reconnect with family.

"I think Yonas, being such a kind person, who gave all of himself, I think it would be very easy to be swallowed up by a city like Calgary," said Fulton.

But Fulton and others who were close to Yonas say he was about so much more than that bitter end.

"When I think about Yonas what comes to mind is always walking around town with this great big afro and this pick stuck in the back and cowboy shirt and cowboy jeans and boots."

GORD FULTON

He was a great magician, an athlete, a brother, a son, and a friend.

"When I think about Yonas what comes to mind is always walking around town with this great big afro and this pick stuck in the back and cowboy shirt and cowboy jeans and boots," said Fulton.

Before coming to Didsbury in 2004, Yonas stayed with a prominent rodeo family near Okotoks and that's when he decided to take up bull riding.

"I remember shaking my head," said Fulton.

"I'm looking at him, 110 pounds, and he's getting on these bulls that are a couple thousand pounds and I'm going, 'you're nuts kid', but he never thought about it."

"He would just get on there, do his best, get his butt thrown halfway across the place, get up, dust himself off and get right back on the next one."

The rodeo kids he travelled with remember him as a guy who was always happy.

"He never got worked up about anything," said Carson Richardson.

Bareback rider Dusty Roberts agreed.

"You couldn't get the kid mad," he said.

At least not for long. Fulton said whenever Yonas was unhappy, you had only to tell a joke and a great big smile would return to his face.

His smile and sense of humour had a lot to do with his popularity.

Temporary 15th Ave. sidewalk a no go

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

A temporary sidewalk to alleviate pedestrian traffic concerns along 15th Ave. in front of the new high school will not go ahead, at least for now.

Town council had asked administration to look into a temporary solution pending the possibility of a grant through the Canada-Alberta Municipal Rural Infrastructure Fund that would offer a permanent solution.

But after listening to administration's thoughts, the costs of even temporary solutions were considered too high and council opted instead to direct administration to continue to seek funding for the entire project through the CAMRIF grant.

Councillor Ryckman worried the temporary material wouldn't hold up to weather conditions, erosion, etc.

And Development Officer Robert Wigg agreed, saying the installation of a temporary sidewalk would likely result in a constant maintenance issue.

"To be quite honest, this is a very temporary solution, which I think would have somewhat limited success," he said.

"To be quite honest, this is a very temporary solution, which I think would have somewhat limited success."

ROBERT WIGG
Town of Didsbury
Development Officer

Wigg said in his opinion

there is adequate space to walk on both sides of the road right now.

"It's whether they choose to walk there or not," he said.

Mayor Dorothy Moore said for now, council will do what it can.

"We're going to do our best to make a place where they can walk safely and we'd like them to use it because we can't give them a permanent solution yet, in mid-winter especially," she said.

The Town will work to maintain the surface that is currently there and has met with students to educate them on pedestrian safety.

CAMRIF grant money is expected to be announced later this month.

"That's what we're hoping for," said Mayor Moore.

"That would mean we'd be digging up the entire road, doing the major overhaul, which will take care of a lot of the issues we're having now and provide us with the kind of infrastructure we're going to need for the future - sidewalks and pipes and everything."

If the Town does acquire funding for its 15th Ave. project, Wigg estimates work won't begin for at least a year.

RISKY BUSINESS - Grade 10 students along 15th Ave. from the high school. Parents have complained about dangerous conditions facing students walking without a sidewalk. The Town has rejected the construction of a temporary sidewalk along the pedestrian route, but will maintain the current surface while they await a decision from the provincial government to fund a permanent sidewalk.

Shooting victim home

BY JODI STYNER
MVG Staff

The 14-year-old Didsbury boy who was shot in the leg Jan. 4 is back at home and doing just fine, but his mom said when she first got the call she was pretty frightened.

"I was very upset because you don't know how bad it is," she said.

"I mean that's the thing, how bad are you bleeding, where are you hit, etc. You hear the leg, but you don't know where."

The call actually came from her sister who is a nurse at the Didsbury Hospital.

"I guess they figured she could come out and help them," said the boy's mom.

"But she told them to call 911, so they did then."

When the boy's aunt saw the ambulance pull up to the hospital without its lights flashing, she was worried.

But co-workers assured her they'd been in communication with the ambulance and he would be OK.

He was later transferred to the Children's Hospital in Calgary, where doctors decided to leave the bullet in his leg.

Police had said they believed the bullet was removed, but the boy's mom said that's not the case and her son would like to set the record straight.

"The bullet was never removed and has not yet been removed," she said.

"He wants everybody to know he's got a bullet in his leg. He's 14, right?"

She said the shooting was accidental, despite an ongoing police investigation.

"As far as I'm concerned it is accidental. I'm not sure what kind of investigation is still going on," she said.

"They were hunting and they just got goofing around and a gun went off and he got shot in the leg."

DMC loses another doctor

Recruitment efforts stepped up

BY JODI STYNER
Didsbury Review

The Didsbury Medical Clinic has once again been left short-handed as its latest addition, Dr. Toyé Oyelese, has decided to leave the practice.

"CHR told him that he did not have to open a clinic in order to work at the hospital," said Dr. Ash Jaffer.

"That was his ultimate objective and so he dropped his clinic duties."

Dr. Jaffer said Dr. Oyelese will continue to work at the Didsbury hospital, but his recent decisions have left a bad taste in his mouth.

"We started the new year with two fully booked clinics for him, which he did not show up for and didn't even let us know that he wasn't going to show up," said Dr. Jaffer.

Dr. Oyelese was only with DMC for just over two months.

The last time DMC hired doctors, they too left, after just two weeks in the office.

So now the clinic is once again searching for a replacement.

"Obviously we're going to recruiting for new physicians and we're always looking," said Dr. Jaffer.

"We're still working with the CHR and the Town to try and find physicians who want a clinical practice as well as a clinical and hospital practice."

The Town of Didsbury recently sent out a letter to local businesses asking for their help in the recruitment effort, by offering coupons for gift baskets to give to interim and new doctors.

Jaffer encouraged the action, saying one of the biggest obstacles to physicians feeling comfortable in small towns is feeling welcomed.

"Having the businesses send out the welcoming-wagon to help not only physicians but their families as well, I think that's one big tool in recruitment that we can do as a small town," he said.

"It gives that small town feel."

Mayor Dorothy Moore agreed.

"There are lots of places they could live, but we believe Didsbury is a special place that we've chosen and we think if they get to know us that they will choose Didsbury as well," she said.

Moore said a 1995 study indicated that approximately 70 per cent of Didsbury residents were seeking medical care in other communities.

"If people all went to the doctors we could keep them quite busy."

Ideally the Town would like to have five doctors, but they are in stiff competition with a province-wide shortage being felt.

"Making doctors and their families feel welcome and a part of the community will go a long way in making our town stand out from many of the others trying to recruit doctors," said Colleen Gustavson, economic development coordinator for the Town.

Yonas was known to hang out with everyone.

"He either had something in common or he made something in common with every little group," said his cross-country coach, Mark Leggett.

Anyone who attended his 18th birthday party can attest to his popularity.

"A bunch of us got together and barbecued hamburgers and I said, 'just have a few people in,'" said Fulton.

"I came in and I had kids from Carstairs, Olds, everywhere. He had everyone from cowboys to skate kids and he was just loving life."

It was the first birthday party Yonas had ever had and looking back, Fulton is glad they could give him that. Even if for the next two weeks he had to help Yonas draw in eyebrows where friends had shaved the hair off.

"Talk about doing it with a bang," said Fulton.

YONAS AMAIAZON

Last year when Yonas moved back to Calgary to be with family it was the last time Fulton would see him.

He left behind some clothing, track medals and rodeo gear, but never came back for them. On Jan. 2, before hearing the news of Yonas's death, Fulton threw it out, realizing that after a year, he probably wasn't coming back for it.

"Now I wish I could have given it to his mom, to show her how proud of these things he was," he said.

But there are a lot of 'I wishes' and 'what ifs'.

"If he had stayed in Didsbury I think he would have been OK because everybody looked out for him and everybody cared about him."

"As I looked across the faces of people at the funeral, I don't think Yonas ever really realized how many people he touched," said Fulton.

He was a boy who came from the city streets and was adopted by a small town that couldn't help but fall in love with him.

"I remember him getting up for school and he'd come flying down the stairs, picking out his hair as he was running out the door," said Fulton.

"Yonas with an afro and a big smile. That was Yonas. There wasn't anyone like him."

Year of the Pig

A sure sign you are finally settling into 2007 is remembering, without a lot of thought, to write the appropriate date on our cheques.

But just as we complete the changeover, across the world over a billion people are just preparing for their own new year celebration.

Red and gold lanterns are being hung from street lights and doorways, parents are stuffing red envelopes with money for their children, markets are overflowing with festive foods and little pigs are popping up everywhere in preparation for the 15-day run known as the Chinese New Year.

As the Dog gets set to abdicate his throne to the Pig, I'm reminded of a bizarre and very real animal new year experience I had while travelling through S.E. Asia last year at this time.

First there's the monkey tied to a tree (because she attacks women, but men can pick her right up).

Then into the scene runs a little Shepherd puppy.

Now enter Pig.

The three freeze in their corners, eyes darting left and right, sensing a threat for control of the scraps of food being thrown by the Hawaiian-print-clad foreigners.

Who will win you ask?

Well, my initial thought is that the dog is the quickest, but also, according to the zodiac calendar, the least selfish.

The monkey, though a determined and mischievous plotter, is tied up, so what harm can she do to the others? But then I see her lunge at the pig and catch the end of his tail. As he squeals with fear, the dog runs up and grabs the chunk of bread.

But it isn't over. The monkey is still hungry and the pig, despite his reputation of shirking confrontation, is not going to let a little tail yank come between him and lunch.

I watch as the dog and the monkey seemingly come to an agreement to sacrifice the pig and share the food. A few seconds later, the dog is actually herding the pig toward the monkey. So much for loyalty.

It is, hands down, the most hilarious real-life joke I've ever seen, but being the animal lover that I am I feel bad for the pig and even for the mean monkey because who likes to be tied to a tree all day?

So, I make three piles of food and enlist some friends to help me lure the dog and the pig to separate areas to feast. Then I throw the third pile to the monkey and watch as she picks the egg pieces out of the rice and chucks the rice away. She then bites into a tomato and throws the skin away. Funny little creature.

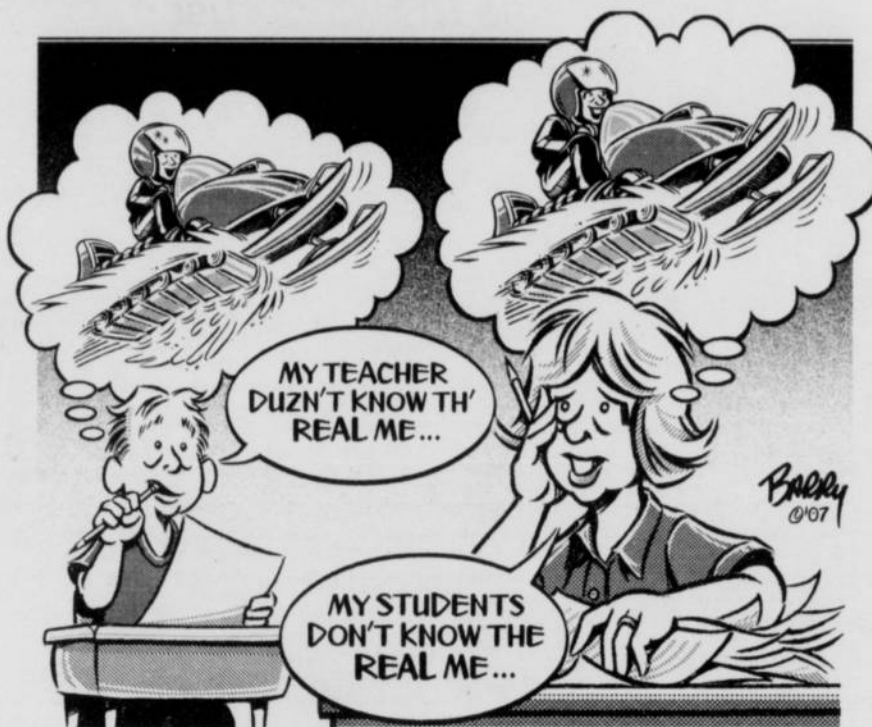

Unfortunately there's one more problem. Some geese in an adjacent field have observed this whole scene and are now loudly vocalizing their disappointment at being excluded from the feeding.

So I throw some scraps of bread in their direction and the dog, now done his meal, decides this is the perfect time for a post-lunch game. He starts chasing those geese around the field and doesn't let up until they can no longer run, and then the little bugger finally retires to the shade under a picnic table for his afternoon nap.

I guess in the spirit of ringing in the Year of the Dog, the dog was in fact ready to reign.

But this February it will be time for the patient pig to shine.

A Climate Change Agenda?

Re: "Warming up to change" editorial Jan.9 Review

I have to question when people use unusual weather patterns, whether hot or cold, or weather predictions that haven't happened yet as irrefutable proof for global warming. We only have records of the earth's temperatures for the last 100 to 150 years, and within that time period, the average temperatures have been both hotter and colder than now. Between 1940 and 1975 there were actually dire predictions of an impending ice age. Earth has always undergone various weather cycles, and even periods of extreme temperatures. Not only have we survived an ice age, but there is evidence that the whole earth was actually much warmer, even tropical. Scientists have uncovered palm trees under the ice of Antarctica, proving that it was not always a frozen land mass. There have also been ancient nautical maps discovered of the outline of Antarctica without ice, and they have been proven to be accurate through the use of modern technology. It also looks like at one time the North Pole was much warmer, and wonder of wonders, earth has survived and life has not ceased to exist. All the animals did not go extinct, and man still walks the face of the earth. As late as the Middle Ages, scientists have found evidence of much warmer weather trends than today.

If all the ice in the ocean at both ends of the earth were to melt, would it really flood the world? Ice takes up more volume than water, and the oceans could actually go down if it melted. Warming oceans would create more evaporation (hence cloud cover and cooling) and bring rainfall for many areas of drought and famine. Think about it! The whole gamut of predictions and disaster scenarios attributed to warming vary immensely and are based on assumptions and fallible computer assimilations which have to factor in many uncertainties. These are long-range, hypothetical predictions folks, coming in a day and age when any scientist who legitimately writes against climate change is scoffed at and their work rarely hits the media. I would put more stock in these predictions if these same scientists, with all their computers and satellites, could accurately forecast tomorrow's weather three days in a row!

So what purpose lies behind the current hype of imminent disaster besides concern for the earth? There is a movement in our world toward a one world government where nations would lose their sovereignty and the world would be governed through an elite agency tied to the UN. This movement is being steadily and systematically moved forward by a powerful group of world leaders including Mikhail Gorbachev, Maurice Strong (Canada), Al Gore (US) and others from the UN and world financial institutions. They have chosen environmental issues as a cornerstone for pushing forth their agenda, as they believe it is the crucial world issue they can rally enough support around to convince people they must band together under a single government to save the world from disaster or extinction.

Through the many Earth Summits since the '90s, the Earth Charter, Global Forums attended by the world's elite, and their UN sponsored scientific reports, they have pushed their vastly exaggerated propaganda of global warming, holes in the ozone, overpopulation, etc. to suit their agenda. (They don't tell you that the ozone "layer" depletes itself over Antarctica every winter, due to lack of sun exposure, and replenishes itself every summer. Or that if we gave all six billion people on earth 900 square feet of land each, they would all fit in the state of Texas with space left over.) These men are already putting plans in motion so that, once they gain power, they will be able to enforce their rule through an international military force if necessary. They have well-documented plans for a global taxation program to fund their government and redistribute the world's wealth, world arms control, and global controls on everything down to how many children everyone can have. If this happens, you as a Canadian will cease to have a voice ... and you thought the West didn't have a voice in Ottawa now! People need to look more closely into what's being proclaimed every day in our media and the lack of evidence behind such outrageous claims such as those I've seen insisting that "in 10 years Antarctica will be the only inhabitable piece of land left" or that "40% of the animals on earth will be extinct" based on our present rate of global warming - which is minimal at best. Yes, we need to take care of our environment, but use common sense and look behind all the fear mongering to the facts and check out the real agenda behind it. Is the earth warming? Maybe. Are we on the verge of disaster? Maybe, but not because of climate change.

Lions Shuttle Bus underused

Didsbury is very lucky to have our Lions Shuttle Bus. If Didsburians do not support the bus by using it, we could lose it.

This wonderful service is available to everyone. It picks you up right at your door and takes you wherever you need to go in town for $2.50 one way. It will even travel to Olds for an additional fee. You get into a warm vehicle, there's no shovelling or scraping car windows, you just sit back and enjoy the ride.

If your car is in for repairs, take the Shuttle Bus. A quick trip to AG is just a phone call away. Need to go to the bank, phone the bus.

Going to Memorial Complex for a special activity, take the Shuttle Bus. If it's time for a hair-cut, the bus will drop you at your hairdresser's, and pick you up when you're finished.

Mail pickup, doctor's appointments, lunch at one of our town restaurants, visit a friend, parts pickup to fix that darn car, the Shuttle Bus is available for these excursions.

Last year for Show & Shine, the Lions Shuttle Bus was available to pick you up downtown and take you to within a few yards of the cars. Then when you were finished

"ooohing and ahhing" at all the fabulous cars, the bus was there again ready to drive you right back downtown.

It was also available for the Dog sled races, and if we get enough snow this year, it may again be available to get you there for some winter fun.

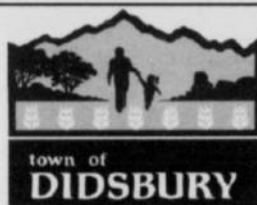

But this service needs the people of Didsbury to use it!

Please keep the Didsbury Lions Shuttle Bus in mind next time you need a warm, comfortable, right-to-your-door ride.

PONDERINGS OF THE HEART

Oh, I'm fine!

BY MARGARET FRADLEY
For the Review

Why is it that we find it so difficult to share our needs, concerns or fears with others, sometimes even those closest to us?

My mother was a loving, sensitive, but stoic lady who never shared her needs or ailments with us. Even when she was dying, she was unable to share about her illness. This was difficult and sad, but we often find ourselves, if we are not careful, falling into the same pattern.

It is obvious I do not mean we are to share every ache and pain continually with everyone we meet, but feeling free to share our needs with others brings us closer together. It makes us more sensitive to one another and it makes it much easier for us to reach out and do what we can, perhaps with a visit, a card, or a phone call. All of these become an expression of our love.

I, personally, am not convinced that sharing our humanity with one another is a sign of weakness, but can be a sign that we trust others, and in turn want them to be able to trust us.

Secondly, I am not convinced that hoping others will think we have it all together is a wholesome or healthy sign.

We need each other and in order to be able to support, encourage and reach out to one another, we need to know your need.

Something to ponder.

Green bins set for April

A Date has been set for the Town of Didsbury's new waste collection system.

Residents can expect to receive their green bins this April with collection to begin the same month.

The green bins will collect all compost materials, including food waste such as vegetables, fruit, solid dairy products, pasta, rice, coffee grounds, coffee filters, tea bags, egg shells and solid fat, as well as yard waste such as grass clippings and plant waste.

Collection of green and black bins will operate on an alternate schedule, with the black bins being picked up every second week and the green collected on alternate weeks.

The Town of Didsbury received a grant application for $53,664.60 to fund the program.

Council and Administration of the Town of Didsbury expect the program to divert 30-40 per cent of the town's waste from the landfill site, based on results achieved by Olds and Sundre since introducing their green bin programs several years ago.

"With the concern that people have over the environment, this is our way of helping to improve the environment," said Roy Brown, Chief Administrative Officer with the Town of Didsbury.

Material collected from the green bins will be delivered to Olds College, and later supplied to the Town of Didsbury for use in our parks and green areas.

If residents feel that they will require an additional black bin for collection of regular garbage, additional bins can be obtained through the Town of Didsbury. Residents using two black bins will be charged twice the regular rate for garbage collection.

For more information a please contact the Town at 335-3391.

DAISY DUKE - Tamara Chaney and Myron Thompson hold the ashes of Daisy Duke, the dog whose death spurred a petition for stiffer animal cruelty laws. More than 95,000 signatures have been collected to be presented at the House of Commons.

Daisy Duke petition on its way to House of Commons

BY JODI STYNER AND
 DAN SINGLETON
Didsbury Review

A petition circulated by a Didsbury dog groomer to push for stiffer penalties for animal abusers, is on its way to the House of Commons with more than 95,000 signatures and counting.

At a gathering to culminate her effort Saturday at Krebs Vet Clinic, Tamara Chaney said the response she's received from across the nation in support of her cause has been overwhelming.

"All the people across Canada who signed the petition, you'll never know how much that means to me," said Chaney.

"The support is wonderful."

MP Myron Thompson, who was on hand to collect the stack of petitions, said he agreed the penalty for purposely abusing an animal should be increased.

"The penalties should be very severe," he said.

"I think you should do jail time. We don't tolerate that kind of treatment of animals."

He pointed to the close link between animal abuse and abuse towards humans as a major reason he feels a change to the animal cruelty laws is needed.

"All of the research we have taken in has shown that those people who choose to abuse animals can certainly choose to abuse a human at any given moment," he said.

"The prisons are full of people like that."

Chaney's Medicine Hat team leader, Paula James, said the important thing to remember is that while the petition was spurred on by the death of one dog - a lab-collie cross named Daisy Duke - the issue is much bigger than that.

"This isn't just about one dog," she said. "It's about these acts that happen every day."

Chaney said the reason she felt compelled to start the petition and the reason she and her helpers saw it through to the end is simple.

"I want to stop people from hurting animals. We want changes, stiffer penalties for animal abusers," she said.

"We don't think this is a joke."

Yvonne Sailer, with Krebs Vet Clinic, said she hopes the petition will lead to a greater positive outcome.

"We don't want Didsbury to be the town that lets people get away with unnecessary animal cruelty," she said.

The approximately 20,000 more signatures Thompson already has sitting on his desk, should push the total number over 100,000.

He has vowed to present the petition to the House of Commons before the first week in February.

"I can assure you that the people in the House of Commons, every Member of Parliament, will know what kind of compassion goes into this kind of petition because I'll tell them," said Thompson.

Colts, Vipers put up defences

BY BARRY WILLIAMS
Didsbury Review

Every junior hockey coach believes a good defence is a team's best offensive threat.

But the Mountainview Colts realize strong defensive play can also contribute to victories.

And they put this belief on the line on Saturday, Jan. 14 at the Didsbury Memorial Complex as they were involved in a defensive struggle against the Red Deer Vipers.

For the most part during the current 2006-2007 Heritage Junior Hockey League, the Colts have relied on their strong defensive play to record victories. Although they played an exceptional game defensively against the Vipers, it wasn't enough as the Vipers escaped with a 2-1 victory.

Defensive struggles have been rare in league play this season so when the top two teams offensively locked horns, fans expected an explosive offensive game but what they received was a lesson in defensive play.

Stealing the limelight of the game were the two masked men between the pipes as the Colts' Evan Miller and the Vipers' Mark Leibel committed highway robbery as the teams' sharpshooters were shaking their heads in disbelief after every shot directed at the opposition net.

When the final buzzer sounded, Miller turned aside 30 shots while Leibel recorded 26 saves.

Both netminders made several exceptional saves and were the main reason the potent power plays fizzled as all three goals were even-strength markers.

After a scoreless first period, Andrew McArthur gave the Vipers a 1-0 lead after forty minutes of play.

Midway through the third frame, Jeff Clazie pulled the Colts even at 1-1 as he beat Leibel with his 18th goal of the season.

With just over four minutes left in the contest, Brent Ford netted the winning goal for the Vipers.

Miller, who hangs his hat in Carstairs, is an outstanding rookie tender. In 14 games he has compiled a record of 8 wins against 6 losses. He boasts a 3.12 goals against average and has a commendable .915 save percentage.

His partner between the pipes, Kris Jackson, is a two-year veteran and is ranked as the league's third best goaltender. Appearing in 11 games, Jackson has won 9 games against a pair of defeats. His 2.94 goals against average is third best in the league while his .915 save percentage is second in the league.

Latest statistics released by league officials have the Colts holding onto first spot in the Central division with 37 points, a single point up on the Airdrie Thunder at 36 points. In third place with 32 points are the Cochrane Generals. Next in line within the division are the Three Hills Thrashers with 20 points and the Banff Academy Bears with 14 points.

With 24 goals and 15 assists, Mike Arnold is the Colts' leading scorer with 39 points. Jeff Clazie has 38 points on 18 goals and 20 assists. Ian Brander has posted 16 goals and 16 helpers for 32 points.

Next home action for the Mountainview Colts at the Didsbury Memorial Complex is on Saturday, Jan. 20 when they host the Claresholm Storm.

Rambler Minute

As mid-season approaches you won't find any of the Bantam Ramblers slacking off. This is a group of players with sights on big goals. Starting off in Tier 3 only to be quickly moved to tier 2 this team has really come together challenging some of the top teams in a very competitive tier 2 division. Sunday's win against Cochrane, who is sitting second overall, moved the Ramblers into third place. The 17 player team is coached by Brent Youngs, Gord Kerr, Ryley Edwards and Chris Jackson. Superb team management is handled by Tom Hadway. Along with a great group of parents this team's future holds a tournament in Consort and Provincial zone play-downs with the possibility of the final destination being a 14 hour trip to LaCrete Alberta. With a great mixture of first and second year players backed by great goaltending, the Ramblers have their sights set on being competitive and a threat to all teams they compete against.

Come out and catch some exciting hockey, our next home game is Sunday January 28 at 12:00 vs Banff.

Write On Contest is a WINNER!

If you're a smoker, CHANCES ARE YOU WANT TO QUIT. So what's the best way?

HOW TO PREPARE TO QUIT SMOKING:

- Change your routines—everything from which chair you sit in at home to where you eat lunch at work.
- Try a new hobby to distract yourself, like exercising or reading.
- Clean your house and your furniture and refresh your wardrobe.
- Cut down your coffee intake.
- Talk to a doctor.
- Find a "quit buddy" at calgaryhealthregion.ca.

If you have a favourite smoking chair, don't sit in it.

Do things to distract yourself, like working on the house or going to the movies.

If you want to quit smoking, you're like the other 55% of smokers who said they wanted to quit in a recent Calgary Health Region survey. One of the best ways to increase your chances is to talk to a doctor. They can recommend strategies for you as well as prescribe nicotine replacement therapies (your employee benefits might even cover these).

Another very effective thing to do is to switch up your routines and take up new activities to keep you distracted. Try reading books. Then working on the house.

Then going for a walk. Then going to the movies. Then exercising. And next thing you know, you will have forgotten about how bad you wanted a cigarette and your physical cravings will have stopped too.

In fact, experts recommend quitters should try to change as much about their routines as possible to be successful.

This can mean trying some or all of the activities listed above or it can mean changing things about your appearance.

Like getting a haircut. Or throwing out your old, stinky clothes and starting fresh — you'll have the spare money to afford it, after all.

It can also mean cutting down on your coffee intake. (Since nicotine metabolizes caffeine quickly, if you don't cut down your coffee intake after quitting you will feel nervous and restless and more likely to want to smoke.)

Another good idea is to change the activities that you associate with smoking. If you smoke while talking on the phone, for example, try holding the phone in your other hand. If you have a favourite chair to sit in while you smoke, don't sit in it. If you have friends who smoke, try to avoid them for a while.

It's also a good time to take up a new hobby. Like reading, or writing, or jogging — or anything else you might be interested in.

For more strategies on how to quit successfully and to get advice from former smokers, visit calgaryhealthregion.ca or call the Smokers' Helpline at 1-866-33AADAC.
